

ABSTRACT

A center pull tissue dispenser comprising or including, means defining an openable enclosure, a base member located within the enclosure with which (and preferably to support) a coreless roll of towel material is located in a manner such that an end face of the roll is placed therewith (preferably thereon), and an opening in a wall of the openable enclosure defining member to allow the towel material to dispense therethrough, wherein downstream of the support of the roll by the base there is provided a dispensing characteristic adjustment mechanism which includes, a passageway through which the towel can pass, and a passageway restriction controlling member, movable relative to the passageway.